ADDRESS

L. BOOKMAN & SON,

Editors and Proprietors

Smethport, Pa., Nov. 2, 1892.

THE great work of turning the rascals in will begin on the 8th of next March. Good Democrats will go early and avoid the rush.

THE official vote of Pennsylvania for Presidential electors will be found elsewhere. The Harrison electors receive a plurality of 83,747

HARRISON was carried for Cleveland by the German Lutherans, 25 000 of whom voted for him on the school question. The same question gave him Wisconsin.

THE Republicans must feel good these days, who are being patted on the back by Democratic newspapers because of their treachery to the Republican candidates at the rear of elections.

WHAT the country really needs is a dose of free trade, and the sooner it is administered the better. Like heroic measures the patient may scream at first, but in the end will be thankful.

THERE is always a to-morrow in politics. The ideas of sound finance and honest money protection to industries and free and fair elections for which the party stands, are not outworn or superseded. Boston Journal.

REPUBLICANS in Kansas claim to have discovered great frauds in the Indian returns, the corrections of which will shoot the entire Republican ticket. When the Populists joined hands with the Democrats they seemed to have adopted all the Democratic dishonesty.

IF misled by sophistries, the laboring men of the country have been the means of defeating those who were working in their interests, experience will teach them the folly of their actions. We were never more impressed with the fact that protection to American labor is necessary than as we write these lines in the shadow of defeat. Erie Observer.

MANY free trade organs which all through the recent campaign shouted "Repeal the McKinley law" are now begging the victorious Democracy for goodness' sakes to go slow and let well enough alone. It will require a judicial investigation to determine whether these cowboys free trade howlers were hypocrites during the campaign or whether they are merely cowards now. N Y Press

THE New York Press one of the brightest and best opponents of sound Republican principals in America is unchanged by our temporary defeat and very sensibly sounds the keynote of another battle in these words "The Republican campaign of 1892 began on the 8th day of November 1892. The issues are defined the lines are drawn and the Republican party has options by defeat is ready for the contest

THE idea of having about everyone New York for a Republican ticket at any time in the future is preposterous unless the Democratic party is fooled as long as that party can every New York city by the infamous frauds which characterize the late election there can be no hope for any other result. Gen Collis testimony on this point will be found in another column, and should be read by every candid citizen. Gen Collis is a staunch man but honest and brave

THE ominous smut which seems to have startled with the Harrisburg Patriot, that Senator Quay would push Hon Wm A Andrews for Independent clerk of the House may be and may not be true But when that paper says that Mr Nichols of Crawford county is also to Quays choice for Lieutenant of the Hopper it talks wind It is not very likely that two of the best positions in the House will be given to a county that sends a solid Democratic Delegation to that body

"AMONG the happiest men in the country" says the Commercial Advertiser, "must be Charles Huntzinger of Pennsylvania, who has lived to see Free Trade unanimously indorsed by the country He thanked God when he saw a Confederate Free Trade plank in the Democratic platform and now he simply shouts hosannas" Doubtless the Georgia statesman that while the rich grow richer, the poor grow poorer an assertion contradicted by a thousand facts and supported by none helped the Democracy by fostering a blind prejudice against the Republican party as favoring "robber monopolists." American Economist

THE Bradford Record is having considerable to say, lately about the fearful prices paid by the county for official advertising. The prices paid is 50 cents an inch for a single insertion An inch covers 12 lines of nonpariel type, which makes the pay 4 1/6 cents per line. These prices were fixed by a board of Commissioners consisting of W J Colgrove, Jno. O Boyer, and the late N W. Abbey, three as honest men as ever served the county in that capacity No three men ever looked after the finances of the county more economically than they, or payed out the county funds more sparingly Those men fixed the prices for all county advertising at 50 cents an inch for a single insertion and $1.50 for three insertions. We venture the assertion that no county in the state gets its advertising done for less money, excepting where our officers have secured it through bids, for newspapers with manager monolithic.

GEN COLLIS WAS WATCHED

About 200 guests and members of the Union League club assembled in the the street the club house There the evening expecting to have Don Cullis tell all about the ballot box stuffing stories about his last summers trip to Pittsburg according to announcement before the meeting. They were all altogether disappointed but here's talk came first in Don Collis next

I think some one ought to be punished for the Democratic fraud of the Federal grand Marshal Everett Wendell and their pleasure At a meeting on the 31 ult in Pittsburg Democratic workers were assembled for the last time before the polls on election day Talking over all matters we mentioned and agreed to get what ever part of the city I should be assigned to My lot fell to a place which you may never have heard of and which I hope I may never see again It was 9th street Well I got there at about 8 o'clock it was rainy and I may say Most of the polling places were opened I went in and a police man also went in Soon the boss of the district who all round appeared The boss of the election came in I looked at my book And I of the policeman walk him to the rear of the room whisper to him and the man spoke to me and I said what do you say here I replied and with a pleasant smile and I left and I

I remember well I went then the boss said to the [illegible] make If you don't put this fellow out of my way I will

The police marched him out and I went up to police headquarters and I said I have a Democrat who is one of mine I had had Superintendent Byrnes called Inspector Williams, who went down to the police place with me in a cab

When the Inspector asked the police man why I was out all over I do ever else my right as watcher the police man told a base faced lie and said he had not interfered and he was about backed him up. Inspector Williams turned on them with the remark I know this gentleman, he tells the truth and you are liars After that I was allowed to stay there, but I couldn't do much good I saw men voted and then go and vote across the street and then come back and vote again There were forty six men who swore they were physically disabled These men were immediately assigned to one of the leaders who would take them in hand to get their ballots for them and pay them, of course and then take them across the street and repeat the operation When I tried to challenge the United States deputy sheriffs told me I had no right to challenge unless I knew the man and where he lived and of course the Democratic inspector, backed up by the United States supervisors, and the Republican inspector was a brother of the Democratic inspector At last I insisted upon challenging a man who said he was John Smith of 61 Oliver street, and whom I had seen vote only a few minutes before He swell need the oath stiffly and voted again

Speaking of Jacobus [illegible] to Gen Collis said

The only United States marshal I saw during the morning was a cripple who was hobbling about and was blind in one eye At three o'clock another one appeared, and I said 'Why didn't you make yourself known earlier in the day' The marshal answered I don't dare open up mouth, they kills me, You do not live a down here, I do.'"

"I think no human genius ever perpetrated such a scheme for perpetrating fraud in voting as our present ballot law All you have got to do is to get control of the ballot office." N. Y. Sun.

FROM THE STATE CAPITAL.

From our own correspondent.

HARRISBURG, November 21st, 1892.—The next week Senators and Members elect of the Pennsylvania Legislature have been coming to Harrisburg and making pilgrimages to "the Hill" to select seats and to transact business with the various departments of State.

In the upper chamber of the Legislature, General Gobin, Senator from Lebanon county, will, without doubt, be chosen as the President (pro tem) of that body Ed Bailey, of Venango county, has no opposition to re election as Chief Clerk and Mr Curtin of the Butler Eagle, Butler county has thus far no opposition to re election to his old place as Reading Clerk I have heard of no one who may want Senator Elect Dunmore's place as Journal Clerk

In the House Representatives Harry Walton Philadelphia ex Speaker Thompson Warren ex Speaker Hew H Blair and P J Lytle Huntingdon are candidates for Speakership honors The Campaign is yet young but it looks as if Harry Walton of Philadelphia might carry off the prize

Mr Blair's friends claim that he is also a good man as he was for the speakership and he is very popular and had many friends in the last House Naturally he will be made in his selection as Speaker of the coming House He would look a very good presiding officer as was shown during the last session when he was called upon to act during the many absences of the regular Speaker Mr Thompson Charlie Voorhees and present Reading Clerk is the only candidate for that office that is said to mean that likely but it will be pressed although with little hope of success Mr Voorhees who was defeated for Senator two years ago, and for Member of the present House, is the late Democratic candidate who will be urged for the Chief Clerkship as a special favor to Senator Quay but Charlie Voorhees says he has no ugly pledge I suppose already to Senator Isaac Pole from Major J D Patterson of this city will no doubt be given the Reading Clerkship [illegible]

As for Senatorial preferment there seems to be little [illegible] by the Senators and Members of the Legislature Following the example of the Senators but later news is to the effect that they have postponed final action until they meet in Harrisburg for the Session

Since the adjournment of Presidential excitement in November 8th, in fact ever [illegible] the business of the State has been at a standstill Every one of the party great and small [illegible] that [illegible] York [illegible] that [illegible] with the [illegible] Lincoln [illegible] that as the old [illegible] without the [illegible] among the [illegible] with the new Administration as it should have been but the Empire State cannot keep the party down The spoil seekers of each Pennsylvania town are [illegible] as well as President Cleveland was [illegible] possibility which [illegible] the greatest delight that [illegible] at [illegible] the [illegible] of New York city have [illegible] for such [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The divisions are distinguished by the word "Message card" and "Reply Card." Nothing is allowed to be written on the reply division by the first writer except the return address. He remained in Steuben county eight years and then moved to Cattaraugus county, N. Y. and settled on a farm in Farmers Valley. Four of whom, James D., of Farmers Valley, N. Y., and Mrs. Watson S. Cook, of Cuyler, survive him. His wife, aged wife, accompanied Mr. Perrin to McKean county about forty years ago and has made it his home ever since. In 1862 Mr. Perrin enlisted in Co. C. 150 Regt. Penna Vols. and served till the close of the war. In January 1864, he had all of his toes frozen off and was discharged from the hospital at Philadelphia. She was the widow of the late Miles Crossmire and was aged 50 years. She died not five miles from the house in which she was born and lived the last few years of her life. They were married about 20 years ago. At one time Crossmire was in straightened circumstances and on account of his many debts deeded his two farms to his wife. In later years when he desired to regain the property trouble arose Mrs. Crossmire refused to give up the titles. Her life was made miserable and after 20 years of happy companionship they separated Mrs. Crossmire went to Eldred to live last December Crossmire died and his widow decided to return to the old home stead and take care of her father-in-law, Daniel Crossmire who is aged 82 years, and host after the farm. She was a kind affectionate, hard working woman, who had seen lots of trouble but was beloved and esteemed by all her neighbors and those who knew her. Her death will be generally regretted.

COLD-BLOODED MURDER.

MRS. LUCRETIA CROSSMIRE BRUTALLY AND MARDERED AT FARMERS VALLEY.

Ralph Crossmire, a Son of the Murdered Woman Arrested For the Crime.—Details of the Horrible Deed.

The little hamlet of Farmers Valley, about five miles from Smethport, was thrown into a terrible state of excitement, which was soon communicated to this place, on Saturday evening last, by the finding of the lifeless body of Mrs. Lucretia Crossmire suspended by a rope from a beam in the barn about ten rods from her house. It was at first supposed she had committed suicide, but subsequent development established the fact that she had been brutally murdered. The particulars of the horrible crime, of which a son is suspected, are substantially as follows:

About half past five o'clock on Saturday evening, Mrs. Crossmire, as was her usual custom, started for the barn to milk her cows, and that was the last seen of her alive. Time dragged on and her father-in-law Daniel Crossmire, who is 82 years of age grew anxious about her long absence and sent George Herzog the seven year old son of a neighbor who chanced to be in the house out to the barn to see what the trouble was.

A lantern was lighted and the lad ran out to the stable. Upon pushing open the door he was horrified to see the body of the woman hanging by the neck to the beam. He ran screaming into the house and informed old Mr. Crossmire of what he had seen. The old man told the lad to run and tell the neighbors as he was too feeble to move himself. The boy did so, and soon the people began to arrive. They found a sickening sight awaiting them. There in the faint light of the lanterns was hanging the body of the unfortunate woman. Her face was covered with blood her tongue protruding and her skirt was torn off. There was plenty of evidence of foul play notwithstanding the fact that the murderer had tried to make the affair look like a case of suicide. A pool of blood was upon the floor four feet away from the place over which the body hung. The woman's hair at the back of the head was covered with filth from the floor, tracks of a man's rubber boots were found in the fresh snow and other evidences discovered.

Coroner Slocum, who had been notified arrived at Farmers Valley on Sunday morning and impanelled the following jury: Messrs. J. C. Stull, W. P. Beck with H. W. Baker Cooper Smith Leslie Patterson and Fred Cleveland all of Farmers Valley. They viewed the remains and adjourned to meet at Smethport Tuesday morning.

Ralph Crossmire who is suspected of the crime, was arrested by Sheriff Grubb and Deputy Sheriff Clark on Monday afternoon about four miles from this place, while on his way from Mt. Jewett to the county seat. It is said, to surrender himself to the authorities. When overtaken by the Sheriff who informed him that he had a warrant for his arrest the young man did not reply. He simply turned a deaf ear and kept driving. He offered no resistance. He seems perfectly cool and collected.

There was a large audience at the coroner's inquest on Tuesday morning, nearly the entire population of Farmers Valley being present. On the evidence of George Herzog Daniel Crossmire, John Mosier and Edgar Tyler of Farmers Valley and Dr. Freeman of Smethport the jury returned the following verdict:

That the said Lucretia Crossmire came to her death at Farmers Valley, McKean county Pa. on the evening of November 19, 1892, by being choked and smothered by some parts or parties unknown to this jury.

The evidence is very clear that murder was committed. Ralph Crossmire is now in jail and will be given a hearing as soon as further evidence which is being looked up is secured—probably to-morrow.

Mrs. Crossmire was a member of the Baptist church and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and aside from her son was not known to have an enemy in the world. She was the widow of the late Miles Crossmire and was aged 50 years. She died not five miles from the house in which she was born and lived the last few years of her life. They were married about 20 years ago. At one time Crossmire was in straightened circumstances and on account of his many debts deeded his two farms to his wife. In later years when he desired to regain the property trouble arose Mrs. Crossmire refused to give up the titles. Her life was made miserable and after 20 years of happy companionship they separated Mrs. Crossmire went to Eldred to live last December Crossmire died and his widow decided to return to the old home stead and take care of her father-in-law, Daniel Crossmire who is aged 82 years, and host after the farm. She was a kind affectionate, hard working woman, who had seen lots of trouble but was beloved and esteemed by all her neighbors and those who knew her. Her death will be generally regretted.

A RURAL THANKSGIVING.

"The past rises before me like a dream," as Bob Ingersoll said. We are back in the good old times before the war, in the middle section of the Wabash valley. The glorious, mellow, yellow, late autumnal days have come. Indian summer is past, it is true, but its aroma still lingers on the brown meadows and in the gloriously variegated woods. At least one year in three we have "late springs and late falls," as the farmers say, and this is one of the years. The frost is on the pumpkin, but lightly as yet, and the fodder is in the shock, though the cattle still browse a little and are fattening in the stalk fields, from which the yellow corn has just been gathered.

"This is the time of year when everything tastes good," the boys say. "This is the season when the game is at its best," say the hunters. "And this is the season when our bones hurt us the least," the old folks say. The milk is cool and rich. All the vegetables are at their best, perfectly ripe, but not yet withered by weeks of lying in the cellar. And the small boy—how he does enjoy this season! These are the days when he "slips off at afternoon recess," gives the school house the "cold shake" and hurries to the south woods, there to gather the big green walnuts in piles; pounds the soft hulls off and picks out the nuts, pausing on his daily to crush one with a convenient stone for immediate consumption. His lips are stained; his hands are dyed and dull brown; he knows it will never come off till it wears off, and that the chances are even that he will get whaled, but still he does it as he did it last year, and as he will do it again. We all did it.

It is the day before Thanksgiving—a glorious, golden, sunshiny and stimulating day—and the old farmyard is full of life. Red Pete, as we call last year's gobbler, is strutting about in the glory of freshly attained adult gobblerhood, as proud and important as if he were directing the proceedings. He is in a sense, though he little imagines the sense, "Our riot dooms him to bleed today," as Pope says, but not having our reason he can look on in the happiness of ignorance. The chopping block, staked fast for the convenience of cutting kindling, is before his eyes, and just beyond the ax is on the grindstone, but he little imagines that it all has any reference to him; that he is the central figure in the coming proceedings. He is lovely in life, and in death he will be divided, the preacher and the poor getting their share.

The wife and mother takes stock of ducks and chickens, but talks of the social features. Will the boys get home from Asbury university? They will, for the "specialties" as college boys in three days called the remittance, was sent in time, and even now the younger brother has gone to the country depot to fetch them home in the old farm wagon. Thanksgiving morning—the light breakfast is soon dispatched, for that is a small affair on such a day. There is a general brushing up, and all are off to the country church. The preacher and his wife return with the family, and about 1 o'clock the great event of the day is on.

All are there—the two boys from college, the hired man and one or two cousins, the oldest girl of the family and the rosy cheeked farmer's son married a year or so before. The baby is laid on the bed in the nearest room, and there is always at least one little girl so fond of children that she volunteers to watch him. The happy group is seated, the preacher has his devotional say and actual business begins. Red Pete shines once more, in culinary beauty this time, but it is positively his last appearance on these shores. And then the long afternoon of social chat and innocent merriment, and the evening in which the young people take possession of the house! Such was Thanksgiving in the good old times, each for the most part it still is, and such may it long continue to be. VIGO.
